

Kairos--Reading and Writing Across the Indigenous Humanities

Kairos--Reading and Writing Across the Indigenous Humanities is a reading and writing course that will facilitate student research and writing for college; best practices for educational focus & agency; interaction with academic disciplines; and reading for understanding, recall, Seminar, and writing (both academic and creative). This course will feature select academic disciplines as lenses to view particular threads of human activities to tell the story of how we have evolved, migrated, warred, created human cultures, made art & music, governed ourselves, and invented things. This survey will reference the story of human history, focusing on modernism and post-modernism, in an effort to enter conversations involving global Humanities, culture, current events, futurisms, and Indigenous Humanities. All levels. 4 credits. Online Hybrid (has sync and async components). Required class meetings Mondays 6-9:30 via zoom.
