

The Climate Lecture Series Presents:

Voices of Indigenous Resistance: Climate Justice and International Solidarity in North and South America

Guests

- Jacob Johns: An Akimel O'odham and Hopi artist and community organizer from Spokane, Jacob is deeply involved in grassroots movements and has participated in various United Nations climate summits to foster unity and resilience.
- Kayla Jenkins: An environmental activist with strong ties to the A'i Cofán community in Ecuador, Kayla works tirelessly to protect Indigenous lands from oil exploitation, continuing the legacy of Eduardo Mendúa.
- Jhajayra Machoa Mendúa: A leader in the A'i Cofán community, Jhajayra provides critical insights into current resistance efforts and the importance of safeguarding Indigenous territories from oil exploitation.

Topic

Join us for an enlightening panel discussion on the intersection of climate justice and Indigenous rights. This event will delve into grassroots experiences, efforts at UN climate summits, and the protection of Indigenous lands from oil exploitation. Gain insights into current resistance efforts and the critical role of Indigenous leadership in the global fight for environmental protection. This powerful conversation underscores the urgency of protecting our planet and the rights of its most vulnerable inhabitants.

WED. JAN 22 | 11:30 TO 1PM

COM BUILDING & ONLINE

VISIT: EVERGREEN.EDU/CLIMATE

evergreen

Center for Climate Action and Sustainability